

Urban Design Futures

Laiba Sundas* and Afifa Khanum

Urban Design Futures, a collection of provocative 'think pieces' about the scenarios in which urban design could evolve, is edited by two practicing urbanists Malcolm Moor and John Rowland. The book was first published in 2006 in UK and then was reprinted in 2008 by Routledge (Taylor & Francis group) simultaneously in the USA and Canada. The editors have compiled 22 essays by individual authors mostly from the western global sphere.

The editors of the book are both British practicing urban planners who specialized in providing urban design expertise to both public and private sector. They believe that the future proofing is central in terms of designing sustainable neighborhoods and the book could be considered as a step towards this futuristic vision in urban design.

This article can be cited as:

Sundas, L. (2015). Review of the book, by J. Rowland. Journal of Arts and Social Sciences, 2(1), 77-84.

Contents of the Book

The book celebrates the plurality of thinking and approaches in urban design and recognizes the emerging ideas on how to arrive at what we all agree is the destination; more

* Laiba Sundas, Corresponding author. M. Arch Scholar, College of Arts & Design, University of the Punjab.
Email: sundas@gmail.com

 Afifa Khanam, Assistant Professor, Institute of Education, Lahore College for Women University, Lahore.